

Run report for Kangaroo Point Run #2279 21/10/13

They say that a good run report is like a miniskirt, it has to be long enough to cover everything but short enough to be interesting. So here goes! Firstly lets face it, this was a "Pushup Run" so it was bound to a "far cup" and, even if it wasn't, "Scribe" was never going to admit it. So it is hereby adjudged a "far cup". Some of the troops were so resigned to their fate that they went immediately to Mt Cootha. Whatever one may think of that malevolent dictator (aka Divot) at least he chose a venue with plenty of eye candy and the German crap dished up at the "on on" was ok as well.

Now about the run itself. It is a self evident truth that it is pretty well nigh impossible to write a run report for a run that you didn't actually run. But then all of this was fully explained to that overbearing bureaucrat (Pushup) who shoved the pencil and paper into the "Scribe's" trembling hand- not to mention his arse. Since "Scribe" was on his third bottle of chardonnay when he summoned the courage to attempt this literary masterpiece, those of you who are familiar with plagiarism and the tasting notes on the rear end of a bottle may notice some similarity. However you may assured that this is an original literary effort.

" This run was a cheeky little effort. It had a hint of Chardarse with Miles O'Toole. It also had a touch of Meatywhore (by the way that is considered by some to enhance its quality but others are not so sure). At various points it smelt of Catgut or was that Shitbags? Thank god Effluent was not there. It was a pretty infantile effort evidenced by the fact that Embryo and his mate Fang showed up. Overall its effect was to stun and amaze all of those who sought to overcome its complexity. An example was Bren Gun who, when faced with the need to climb 15 floors up to the Story Bridge, was heard to cry in agony, " I'm f.....g going home." This complexity had confusing results. For instance Vaso announced that he was going to run the run but then he walked over the bridge got lost and ran back. The run is sure to win a gold medal at the annual meeting of the Birdsville Bushwackers Club." That's all folks.

from L A Play